

Two Roads

“When the sacred heart is open
The Red Stone of Power shall sing... the divine plan shall be revealed on Earth...
Praise be to The Beloved Source of All Things”

A cosmic design that came into existence by co-creation with the Spirit World

Faith

In 2005 Wim made an object of wood and plaster bandage that was named 'Faith'. In front of the centre, suspended by a nearly invisible thread, he hung a red stone, because 'that felt right'.

Faith started as a four legged cross inside a circle. Playing with a computer program, changing its shape from round to oval and by adding perspective, suddenly the equally legged Celtic cross changed into the Christian cross with a longer downward pointing leg. So only changing perspective shows that both crosses, symbolizing different cultures and different religions, appear to be the same symbol. After that Wim pushed the central part of the symbol down, creating a bowl.

So the Celtic Cross, the Christian Cross and the Holy Grail were combined into one single object. At that time he didn't know anything about Eliza White Buffalo, a woman living in Northern Ireland.

Two Roads began as a vision from a boy named Nicolas Black Elk Nicolas Black Elk (Dec 1863 - Aug 1950) was a famous Wichasha Wakan (Medicine Man or Holy Man) and Heyoka of the Oglala Lakota (Sioux). At the age of 9, during a coma that lasted several days, he had his vision. When he woke up, he told the people around what he had experienced and they understood that he was a clair-voyant.

At around the age of 12 he was present at one well-remembered, but awful day in history: the Battle of Little Big Horn 1876. Several years later he was present at yet another dark day in the history of mankind: the Wounded Knee Massacre, during which he got injured. During his life he has helped many people by the powers the Spirits gave him.

There is one thing Nicolas Black Elk is well remembered by. On one of his journeys that brought him to France and England, he encountered the Christian belief. He discovered that there was not much difference between the White Man's God and the Indian's Great Spirit. And so he became the Indian holy man who became a Christian. He became Christian in 1904, aged forty. Not every Indian was happy about this, but he said: "my children have to live in this world."

In fact he never really abandoned the Indian way, he only didn't do the ceremonial sacred rites anymore. With his powers given to him by Spirit, he has healed many people.

It seems he embraced the Great Spirit and the White Men's God, being the same.

The Indian medicine wheel

Eliza White Buffalo is a clair-voyant woman in Northern-Ireland whose guardian angel is called Nicolas Black Elk. He inspired her to write a series of books called 'The Two Roads Trilogy'. In this (thrilling) trilogy the meaning of the Indian medicine wheel and the Two Roads symbol with the central Red Stone of Power are explained. She writes:

"This is The Two Roads Symbol. The symbol bears resemblance to the ancient Coptic Cross of early Christianity. It also bears resemblance to the medicine wheel of the Native American Lakota Indian way. I first began to see the symbol psychically about 8 yrs ago. Black Elk showed it to me; in those days it looked to me to be white, a cross in circle with a red stone in the center. Today, this is the manifestation of what I 'saw'. The symbol, the medicine wheel too, shows great cosmic truth of oneness. I would like to share the meaning of the symbol and the story of it within the story of the Two Roads trilogy. If you would like please read on...

In The Two Roads Trilogy Black Elk talks about The Red Stone of Power. The Red Stone of Power was given to Rose, heroine of the Two Roads story, by a Golden Being who turns out to be The Eminence of the Father, the Original Soul always in the presence of God. Rose was told that the Red Stone of Power would sit in her heart space; she would climb four ascents into Heaven, and when The Red Stone of Power would sing a prophecy would be released. That prophecy was Black Elk's vision of peace and harmony within one true hoop of all creation.

The Two Roads Symbol shows the path of the soul as I see it below...

Picture a medicine circle with four directions - North, East, South and West. Picture two roads - one going from South to North, and one going from East to West. Now picture the center of the circle where the two roads meet. This is the Holy Center... the Sacred Heart... this is The Red Stone of Power. The center is holy because it is whole... here we know union with the Great and Holy Spirit. Here we ARE of God, of the ONE. I like to call this the Christ Consciousness. It is the Creation of God, God's Child.

If you picture the medicine circle again... and see that the Father is represented in the North, and looking to His reflection in the South, the Mother... you will see that in the center is the essential offspring of the two - the Child, the Creation, the Christ. So the Red Stone of Power is essentially the Christ, the Holy Child of God who is one with its Sacred Parents.

We can see this clearly if you imagine yourself in the center of the medicine wheel. No matter which direction you look... you have a 360% perspective. You know yourself to be God's Child and you have full understanding of all four aspects of your Self. You can 'see' who you are. You see you are Mind in the North, and you are Spirit in the East; you are Emotion in the South and you are Body in the West.

There are three other directions - above, below, and within. Above is the Sacred Father, Father Sky, and below is the Sacred Mother, Mother Earth. Within is the Sacred Heart, The Red Stone of Power, where the Sacred Parents meet - Spirit and Matter. So within is the only place you can receive and give their essence, Light and Love.

Having gone into the center and lifted your mind, spirit, emotions and body up four ascents of awareness of Truth, you are then in a state of communication with your Original Soul... or your Monad, or your Star Origins. You begin to receive information from your Original Soul and you feel a magnetic pull upwards towards Oneness with your Soul. This is the activation of the heart...the twin flames are lit. They are the flames of the Father and the Mother aspects of your Spirit. The Red Stone of Power is activated and in receiving mode.

So imagine this... if you were to rise up another four ascents from that point, where would you be then?

What happens when the Red Stone of Power, or the Sacred Heart is activated is the pull of the Original Soul gets stronger as more and more light fills the heart, lifting mind, spirit, emotions and body even further. Essentially, you are coming closer to the presence of God/Source, wherein your original soul lies.

This has been called 'the second death' and means the dying onto the ego self. When a person's body dies on earth, the person passes into the world of Spirit where he or she eventually discovers the pull of the original soul. The individual soul begins to rise and comes to a second death. When the soul passes through the doorway of the second death it is then in the realms of NO BODY... The soul feels the oneness of all souls and that bliss takes them higher until they return to the presence of God. This whole process is called the ascension.

This is the transition time, 2012, in which we are moving into the new world brought about by the Oneness, the duality of our Divine Masculine Energy and our Sacred Feminine Energy being in balance on Earth... Heaven on Earth. Though we cannot live without our body, it is our ego that appears to die at this time of transition... and is resurrected again to be one with the divine mind.

The Good Red Road and the Fearful Road

The Two Road symbol consists of a hoop or circle and two roads, one vertical and one horizontal road.

Vertically you see the 'Good Red Road', which is the holy road of spirit.

Horizontally you see the 'Dark and Fearful Road'.

Where the two roads meet there's a holy place.

The dark road is our road on Earth, a road that you will need to walk on to be able to make progress on the vertical red road. But... it will challenge you! When you keep walking the spiritual red road only, which seems the smart thing to do, you will see the light in front of you, but you'll never reach it.

You can walk the dark and fearful road safely by always returning to your heart, where the Red Stone of Power resides. From there you have overview. This is a holy place and the Red Stone of Power is Black Elk's expression of the activated Sacred Heart.

So it comes down to making choices. Do you make choices by your ratio only, pushed forward by your ego, emotions, greed, fear, whatever... or does your heart have the final say in your decision making?

You need your ratio, as you do need you ego and your emotions. But only your heart has a direct link to your Higher Self.

Now look what happens when you rotate the Two Roads symbol backwards... and take another look at 'Faith'...

Faith had already been made by Wim years before in 2005, without Wim knowing what it was all about. The only thing that he needed to do was to change perspective. Look at it from another viewpoint and you'll see that it's about one and the same symbol all along.

This counts for the Two Roads, but in fact the same counts for all religions worldwide. Every religion is but another viewpoint, another perspective, of that deeper meaning of Life.... of God, The Great Spirit, Creation itself...

In history the Two Roads-shape has often been used before. It was already used by the Copts, now called 'Coptic Cross' (left picture). The Copts were convinced that they were the first true Christians. They are related to the Essenes and also to the Druids (Celts).

To the right there's the Celtic cross, photographed near Holy Head (Whales, UK).
